FLIERS MAKE ATLANTIC HOP IN SAFETY

ROUND THE WORLD AVIATORS COVER FIRST LAP OF JOURNEY

England's Sun Shines On the Intrepid Yankees As They Come Out of Wind and Fog To the Capital of the British Empire—Trip of 2,350 Miles Was Made In 23 Hours and 21 Minutes—Crowd Was Small, but Made Up in Enthusiasm What It Lacked in Numbers.

In the soft sunshine of an English Sunday morning the big yellow monoplane, Pride of Detroit, with Edward F. Schlee and William S. Brock at her controls, came out of the western skies, circled over the aviation field and landed officially at the London airport at 10:30 o'clock.

The American aviators who are bent on circling the globe in 15 days thus completed the first leg of their long flight and in so doing made the first non-stop trans-Atlantic flight from America to London.

Hopping off at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, Sunday, the Pride of Detroit, in its flight of 23 hours and 21 minutes, ran the gamut of weather conditions across the 2,350 miles of Atlantic waste.

Lightning, thunder, fog, rain, wind and sunshine, as well as freezing weather, and all the other variations of the elements, added danger and excitement to the great adventure.

Without a wink of sleep and with only one sandwich each during the long flight, the American pilots kept their plane headed straight for England.

As they neared their goal the elements seemed to relent, for they flew the last 100 miles of their journey thru mellow sunshine over the peaceful English countryside.

At Croydon there was only a handful of persons to welcome the fliers, but those who were there made up in enthusiasm what they lacked in numbers.

Brock's first words to a policeman were in the form of an apology for being a little behind schedule.

Schlee chimed in with, "We are late, aren't we? Hope we didn't keep you standing around here all morning."

Then as the bobbies joined hands and formed a cordon around the Pride of Detroit, the two fliers piled out the cockpit and began to stretch their legs to make sure they still had them.

Brock and Schlee had ample opportunity to exercise their arms as general handshaking began. The first to greet the two aviators was T. H. Kincaid, representative of the Wright Aeronautical corporation, who had been listening for the Pride of Detroit's motor hum for nearly six hours. Then Dalas Eskell, traffic manager of the Imperial Airways, welcomed the two Americans and extended to them the freedom of the port.

Schlee and Brock for a moment stood as if embarrassed, not knowing exactly what to do. Neither did any one else momentarily, so finally police thought the 200 onlookers were doing too much crowding and began pushing the spectators back. Having in mind the great crowd which turned out to greet Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, the police were on hand in goodly numbers.

As a matter of fact there were nearly as many bobbies as all persons combined, so the bobbies had no difficulty in handling the situation. Several of them asked for autographs, which Brock granted.

Then within a few minutes, the fliers were taken the remaining 20 miles to London by automobile for a day's rest before continuing on to Germany on their world hop. They took off for Munich at 8 o'clock Monday morning.

WILLIAM KUHN'S IMPROVING.
Mrs. William Kuhns and daughter, Miss Veronica, of West High street, returned Sunday evening after a visit of several days with Mr. Kuhns a patient at Mt. Carmel hospital, Columbus. He is getting along nicely, having sat up all day Sunday and expects to come home the latter part of this week.

Eel's Two Hearts
The Smithsonian Institution says that the eel has an organ in its tail that pulsates, and fishermen consider it a second heart. This, however, is not a real heart. On the other hand, if an eel is struck in this region it has the same fatal effect as a blow across the heart.

LESTER COATE AUTO WRECKED AT FRANKFORT

Sideswiped by Machine on Wrong Side of Road--None of the Occupants Hurt.

Lester Coate, of this city, was in an automobile collision Sunday forenoon in which his Franklin car was badly wrecked, but fortunately none of the passengers in either machine was hurt.

The accident happened about one mile south of Frankfort as Mr. Coate accompanied by Miss May Diehl, of Chillicothe, were on their way to Wilmington to attend a family reunion at Bunker Hill lodge. As they were driving along the pike, a car driven by Frank Herman Banks, of Cedarville, hit the side of the Coate car and broke down the wheels, bent the axles, wrecked the top and otherwise damaged the machine, which was taken to Frankfort for repairs.

With Mr. Banks was his wife and child. He assumed all responsibility for the accident as he was on the wrong side of the road.

Mr. Coate's car was insured in the S. G. Rader agency.

An Adept Liar

Woman's privilege is to believe men can mend latches; man's privilege is to expect women to be able to work the latches he has mended.—American Magazine.

Rose Traced to Venus
There are many legends of the origin of the rose. We quote one from "Customs of Mankind": "An old tradition tells us that Venus, hurrying to Adonis with nectar, stepped upon a thorn while alighting from her chariot. Blood rushed from the wound and stained the bush, and a little nectar was spilled over it also. Where both blood and nectar mingled on the bush, a beautiful red rose made its appearance."

Luther Bible Sold Cheap
A Bible that had belonged to Martin Luther was recently included by mistake in a bundle of volumes sold near Mons, and no extra charge was made for it. It is believed that the buyer was aware of the error and got away before the dealer had time to discover his blunder.

No Home-Made Bread
It is frequently said men run their homes. How about home-made bread? I scarcely know a man who does not want home-made bread and cannot get it; the bakers have persuaded the women that bakery bread is better, as barbers have persuaded them about bobbed hair. And look at the clothes the man milliners have persuaded the women to wear.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Machine Measures Love
How one reacts to love, alcohol, cigarettes, coffee, fear or surprise may be determined with scientific accuracy by a new "vitality meter," which records graphically the rate and nature of pulses. The sensitive detector is attached to the wrist and transmits to a recording paper drum every heart action and vibration of the nervous system.

THE ROYAL NEIGHBORS WIN SILVER TROPHY

Circle Camp Comes Home With the Bacon in Contest Held at Columbus.

The drill team of Circle Camp, Royal Neighbors, of this city, were successful in bringing home with them the coveted prize, a small gold-lined silver loving cup, which was presented by the Royal Neighbors of America at their state picnic held at Olentangy park, Columbus, Saturday afternoon, to the best drilled team. Circle Camp team competed against three other teams, all from larger cities, and older camps; Newark, Akron and Cleveland. The prize while inexpensive, is highly prized by the members of the team and each and every one feels rewarded for the hours of work which they cheerfully devoted. This is a newly organized team, the camp itself only being two years old and this being the first appearance of the drill team in public.

The team Saturday was composed of the following:

Captain, Hazel Frey; flag bearer, Mae Peters; musician, Grace Radcliffe and Mrs. Mildred Voll, Mrs. Rose Wolfe, Mrs. Helen Dawson, Mrs. Catherine Pearce, Mrs. Minnie Wilson, Mrs. Virginia Purcell, Miss Dolly Kockensparger, Mrs. George Cutler, Mrs. Mabel Scott, Mrs. Nannie Fowler, Mrs. Elsie Pearce, Mrs. Gladys Wiggins, Mrs. Florence Van Riper, Mrs. Bertha Turner, Mrs. Daisy Morgan and Mrs. Nellie Potts.

The cup is on display in the express office window for a few days, after which each member who helped to earn it will keep it in their own homes for a week each as a reminder for their faithful work.

Circle camp besides winning the prize for the best drilled team also took the second prize, $5.00 in gold, to the camp having the largest percentage of members present at the picnic. So Circle camp should be proud of their wonderful work.

Three prizes were given, the third prize being given to Maple Leaf camp, Columbus, Ohio, for the largest number of juvenile members present.

Jewish Council
Sanhedrin is a word derived from two Greek words meaning council chamber. The Sanhedrin was the supreme council of the Jewish people. It consisted of chief priests, or the heads of the 24 classes into which the priests were divided, elders who were men of age and experience, and scribes and lawyers, that is, men learned in the Jewish law. The number of members is usually given as 71.

RECEIVED WOUND ON HEAD.
Last Friday while J. Grant Swearingen was loading some of his cattle, near Orient, he received quite an ugly scalp wound, but fortunately, was not seriously injured.

Mr. Swearingen had stooped down to open a gate, when the cattle became frightened and ran against him, throwing him against the gate with much force, and a deep gash was cut in his head.

He was taken to Mt. Sterling where he received surgical attention, several stitches being necessary to close the wound.

APPOINTED SUPERVISOR.
Miss Charlotte Ruth Ruff, daughter of Mrs. Charlotte Ruff of this city, has arrived in South Bend, Indiana, where she has been appointed supervisor of music in the public schools.

At the street intersection they collided with a Ford coming from the Columbus detour, off the Jackson pike. They were enroute to Kingston and in the machine were Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Reisinger, his step-daughter, Belle May Keener, Mrs. Mary Hall and children and Wilbur and Marie Hall.

The Keener child received a severe bruise over her left eye Wilbur Hall's left leg was cut severely, but the rest of the party escaped injury. Dr. S. W. Evans attended to their wounds.

In the other car were Talmadge McDowell, Rufus Fletcher, William Parks, Edward Lockler and Stanley Williams, all colored. McDowell received a severe cut on the side of his head, his shoulder was bruised; William Parks was injured in the chest and the balance of the men in this car escaped injury. Dr. H. D. Jackson gave them surgical aid.

MURDERS WIFE SHOOTSELF AT YELLOWBUD

William Collett, While Drunk Sunday Afternoon, Commits Awful Deed.

Domestic trouble resulted in the murder of Mrs. Lucretia Collett, 50, and the attempted suicide of her husband, William Collett, 48, Sunday at their home near the Williamsport pike, about four miles from Yellowbud.

According to officials of Chillicothe Collett followed his wife out in the yard and fired a 22-calibre rifle, the bullet entering her head under the left eye. She died a few minutes later in the arms of her son.

Collett later was found in his room with a bullet wound in his head above the left eye. He was removed to the county jail by Sheriff Alfred Immell and later to the City hospital Chillicothe, where attaches said there was no chance for his recovery.

Sheriff Immell stated Collett had been drinking heavily Sunday and due to this condition it was hard to tell just how badly he was injured.

Recently Mrs. Collett inherited several thousand dollars from the Layton estate.

According to Sheriff Immell, there had been difficulty in the family for some time, divorce action having been started upon two occasions by Mrs. Collett.

The murdered woman was a daughter of James and Eleanor Tootle Layton. She was about 50 years of age.

She leaves three children; Ethel, Everett and Edith. She is survived by three sisters; Mrs. Ida Hankins, Mrs. Flora Hankins and Mrs. Rebecca Harmount.

William Collett is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Collett. Frank Collett, of Wayne township; Newton Collett, of Williamsport; Mrs. Carleton Cross, of Yellowbud and Mrs. William Albright, are brothers and sisters.

Bales of this city and Dr. J. S. Fisher, of Sabina, rendered surgical aid.

CONSTANCE LATTIMER, actress, was quite certain she was a victim of conspiracy.

"It's my good looks," she told her self. "They are jealous and the managers side in. That is why I have never been given a real part." She stamped her small foot, tilted her chin and resolved that she would go on trying until some day her friends, the real friends, the people across the footlights, would give her such a salvo of applause as would rout jealousies and force the tardy recognition.

It was a brave resolution, but back in the head of the pretty actress was born a tiny doubt. Could it be that her only appeal on the stage was that of beauty? Were they right, those managers, who, said she could not act?

As the questions persisted she worked the harder saying to herself that for one triumph she would give up the stage and the career which had beckoned. But she must first have that triumph. Then came Capt. Donald Trill in his handsome uniform and with his pleasing ways, and the problem became the more difficult.

"I cannot marry you, Donald," she said, "because it would be to surrender right now when the battle is at a crisis. You are soldier enough to understand. You see, I wish to prove to myself that I can act, to show that my efforts and dreams have not been in vain. If I stop trying, to be married, I will never know whether I could have succeeded." She looked at him wistfully. "You understand, don't you, and maybe it won't be long before I make good."

"And then?" asked the captain. Constance sighed and a hopeful look came into her eyes. "And then I will quit the stage forever. I'm tired of it, tired of walking about in pretty clothes, repeating foolish lines, when I might be making ginger cookies in my own kitchen and for, for my own husband. Oh, Don, I hope I succeed but, until then, we can't talk about it any more."

With a double incentive the girl put still more of her energies into the task of acting. Perhaps she tried too hard, strove too eagerly, and her very anxiety defeated its purpose. She remained the same defeated member of the cast, attracting little comment favorable or other. In the company the beginners may have envied her. The older ones shook their heads and remarked that it was strange that a girl with her beauty and promise had never really arrived.

"There is something, just that little something which we would give the world to discover, that is holding her back."

There came a chance to Constance, not a great one but a part of some few more possibilities than those which had gone before. The girl put strength and brain into the rehearsals, shutting Donald and her dreams of love out of her mind. She must make good and then—she would quit with the applause ringing in her ears! She would show them, she would show Donald, and, better than all, she would show herself.

A thoughtful manager stood in the wings on the evening of the dress rehearsal. The same lack, he thought, was present in her work.

"Serves me right," he grumbled. "for thinking she could do it. I will have to find another to take her place when we move on to the big season in New York." All evening he studied her. "And yet if she could just shake out of it, just to find that flaw and hide it, she would go over big."

The opening night came and with it a cool and determined Constance fighting the greatest battle of her career. Donald was down in front and some critics from the city were there. Some how she did not care. She wanted to win the applause of the people of the town, the ones who had paid their money to get in and who made up a part of the great American audience.

At the end of her first scene she was almost frightened when she heard them clapping and it did not seem possible that it could be for her. Then she took her first curtain call bewildered at the enthusiasm she evoked. Now she was entering the spirit of the play as she had never thought she could. She was playing to people who loved her and the applause increased.

"Donald!" she ran to her lover when the curtain had gone down on the last of many calls. "I've made good, made good at last and we'll have that house, and—and those ginger cookies!"

And Capt. Donald Trill thanked his lucky stars and the sixty men in his company who, at his command, had applauded so bravely in various parts of the house.

TWO KANSU QUAKES MAKE NEW RECORD

China Hard Hit Twice in Seven Years.

Washington.—The earthquake of May 22 in the Kansu province of China happening so soon after that of 1920 in the same region sets a new record. Never before in the knowledge of Commander N. H. Heck, in charge of the United States coast and geodetic survey's earthquake investigations, have two such severe shakes in the same region occurred so close together. It was Commander Heck and his associates, using data gathered from seismograph observatories by Science Service, who located the position of the quake long before reports from the devastated area reached civilization.

Half Million Deaths in 1920. In the quake of 1920, an estimated total of half a million people were killed, but according to reports from the region the casualties of the May earthquake numbered about 100,000. The 1920 quake was a little nearer to Peking, but other reasons are probably responsible for the lower loss of life in this latest one.

The Kansu province has been described as the "Wild West of China." Like our own wild west in the early days, it is a very unsettled region, and there have been frequent uprisings among the people of the region, who are largely Mohammedans. The last great uprising was in 1895, and since then the people have abandoned the cities in great numbers. Kulang, which is one of the cities reported as being destroyed, was described a few years ago by travelers, according to the National Geographic society, as being nearly deserted and in ruins. Had the cities been as heavily populated as in past years, the loss of life would have been far greater, as the earthquake was one of the most severe on record.

Most Severe in Mountains. It was across the Nanshan mountains, which lie near Tibet, that the May earthquake seems to have been most severe. A little distance to the north of the devastated region runs the famous Great Wall, which ends about 200 miles to the west of it. Practically through the region there ran in the past one of the great high roads into China. In recent times a railroad along the same route has been proposed. The great earthquakes do not necessarily mean that such a project is unsafe, however.

Though the country contains geological evidence of earthquakes in the past, until 1920 none had occurred within historic times. Perhaps the shakes in 1920 and 1927 have relieved the strain of the region, and no more will occur for centuries.

Giant Skeletons Are Uncovered in Florida

Tampa, Fla.—Giant Indians who roamed Florida swamps 500 years ago or more, living on shell foods which they cracked with their teeth, is a picture unfolded by archeologists who have delved into a burial ground on a gulf island near here.

The skeletons were discovered on a small section of land where a lone fisherman has lived for years. Scientists estimated the bones are at least 500 years old and are remains of a tribe known as the Caribs, natives of the West Indies. They are believed to have inhabited the state and adjacent islands before the arrival of Spaniards in Florida.

The skulls, larger than those of current history, battered and crushed, indicated tribal battles. The jaw and teeth are unusually large. Likewise are the bones, indicating the Indians of past ages were veritable giants in comparison with those of today.

Mounds similar to the one in which the bones were unearthed are common in the state.

The bones have been sent to the Smithsonian institution for further examination.

Use Newspapers to

Buy Eggs in Congo

Rapid City, S. D.—Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Hill, after a visit here with relatives, have returned to the diamond mines in the Belgian Congo. They have lived there three years and during that period were readers of many American publications.

"Newspapers in the Congo are a great source of pleasure and necessity," Mrs. Hill reports. "One cannot buy fresh eggs with money from the natives. Money means nothing to them. They are traders in the old sense and will barter only in kind. Our newspapers are real bargains. For instance, two days after their arrival the natives get them in return for fresh eggs. That is the only way we can get eggs from the natives."

Valuable Meteor

The biggest lump of luck which exists on earth lies nearly 1,000 feet below the surface, near Holbrook, in Arizona. It is a meteor, which fell from the skies and buried itself. In doing so it scooped out a valley three-quarters of a mile long and 600 feet deep. A company has bored down to it and found that it is a mass of meteoric iron, mixed with nickel and other metals. Its value is computed at $12,500,000.

Vest Dress for Stout Women of Medium Height

This vest dress, says the Woman's Home Companion, is for stout women of medium height. Plain with long lines but no severity, it is one of those convenient designs suited to a number of materials. As illustrated, the vest dress is of tan flat crepe, the graceful lines of the V opening, the vest and the pointed front making the trimming of the dress. It is also an excellent design for one of those delightful sheer woollens—wool georgette or wool voile or, if something heavier is desired, rep or kasha.

New Fall Hats Are Snug; Brown Leader in Color

The noticeable thing in hats is the new crown, snug and fitting the head. Indeed, the discriminating woman today buys her hat with a very critical eye to the way the crown fits and looks; the size of the brim is next taken into consideration, but the crown must outline and complement her head.

And due to this trend in hat fashions, a new material has been evolved, which has all the virtues of last season's velours and at the same time is exceedingly fine of texture and light of weight. It carries the quaintly intriguing title of kitten's ear, and that is just exactly what it looks and feels like.

And the colors? This looks as though it might be a season of color warmth—soft, and yet with a rich depth to them. Browns are prominent, with a lovely rosy brown holding first choice, and so on down through the browns from golden brown to seal brown. One of these shades is a gorgeous shade of coppery brown, called copper-leaf.

A color that bids fair to make history in millinery circles is Napoleon blue—not exactly new, for it has survived the summer season. It has a gorgeous vividness that might be trying to certain types.

The reds range from pomegranate to the dark, winey burgundies.

The greens show both a clear deep green and an interesting "off-shade" called almond.

The staple colors are, of course, as much in demand as ever. There will always be women who wear the grays, the sands, dark blue and black!

What Color Fur Coat, an Important Question

There is a rule relating to the wearing of fur to which few women pay any attention and yet which is a positive mandate of good taste. It has reference to the colors of furs. How often one sees a black fur coat worn over a brown frock or a dress of some other color and vice versa—a brown fur coat over a black dress! This combination is in poor taste. Black fur should always be worn over black and never over colored frocks. For the latter one needs brown or gray fur or fur of any hue other than black.

Of course, the woman who can afford them has more than one fur coat, but the woman who can afford only one coat, unless she wears a great deal of black, never should invest in black fur. Other shades are in better taste for her.

Monograms on Sports Frocks, One of Latest

Whether or not you have a monogram which suits your fancy, you can wear a simulated one on your sports clothes. In diamond shapes, squares and circles, these cut-out spots of decoration appear in the center or on the sides of sports frocks—both silks and woollens—and also on the tie ends.

Dress for Sports Wear

White is a favorite color for sports wear, and a dress of white crepe de chine achieves distinction by the addition of narrow bands of snake-skin at the belt and upon the sleeves.

SCOTLAND ONCE HOME OF CAVEMEN

First evidence that Scotland was inhabited by cavemen in the chilly days of the old Stone age has been obtained as a result of excavation in caves of northern Scotland. James E. Cree, who directed researches in four caves, under a grant from the Royal Society of London, has reported the discovery of two human skeletons in connection with bones of bears and other animals of frigid climates. Further evidence of man's occupation of the caves in ancient times was found in a lower level of gravel containing antlers and bones of reindeer together with tools of reindeer horn, antlers cut and scratched by human beings, and bits of charcoal which showed that fires had been burning. These finds are the first indication that there were any human beings in Scotland as far back as the paleolithic era, which ended some 10,000 years ago. Mr. Cree's researches have disclosed the first bones of cave bears and arctic foxes to be found in Scotland.

"RED TAPE" HAMPERS TRADING IN POLAND

Like most governments of countries in economic difficulties, the Polish government has tried to improve matters by a network of regulations and prohibitions. Goods can still only be imported with a license and until lately it was very hard to send money out of the country. Such regulations, if applied at all by a not too well co-ordinated or experienced administration, must apparently affect the small as well as the great.

When the London Daily News correspondent was sent a pipe as a birthday present, which had probably cost $1 or so, to receive it he had first to trudge off to the ministry of trade and industry for a special import license. One lady wanted to send 25 cents in currency to cover postage of a parcel, to a friend in England. She asked a post office official how to do this and he is said to have replied, gravely and politely: "First, madame, you must have the permission of the minister of finance."

PAYS TO ADVERTISETHE LUTHERAN PARISH HOUSE CORNER STONE

Laying Was Sunday Evening, Most Beautiful Ceremonies Held in the Church.

The celebration of the cornerstone laying of the Trinity Lutheran Sunday School and Social building Sunday evening was largely attended. The program was given on the site of the new parish house, but owing to a slight drizzle, Rev. Troutman invited his audience into the church where the program was concluded.

The cornerstone box contains the following: The Holy Bible, Sunday school carols, names of members of the old and new vestry, copies of the Lutheran Youth, The Adult Lesson Quarterly, The Weekly Bulletin, Circleville papers; The Union-Herald Daily and Weekly, The Watchman and The Circleville Herald; names of the building committee, names of the teachers of the Sunday school; names of the pupils of the primary class; the personnel of the Junior and senior choirs and officers of the various organizations of the church.

The new building occupies ground 43 feet in width by 125 feet long. It will be built of red wirecut brick with stone trimmings and will be plain with no ornament or embellishment. The roof which will be cone shaped will be slate and floors will be of hard maple.

The first floor will have two parlors, 16 by 25, opening out into a hallway and will be located in front opposite each other. Back of the parlors will be located the dining room which is 40 by 80 feet, and back of this room will be the kitchen, 20 by 40 feet.

The upper floor will also have two parlors of the same size as that of the first floor and back of these will be located the auditorium, 40 by 100 feet. This room will contain a stage 20 by 40 feet. The auditorium will be partitioned off with accordion doors, to be used primarily for class and Sunday school rooms. These doors can be easily removed. If the room is desired for the giving of social entertainments.

The building of the parish house was much needed as the quarters for the Sunday school in the church structure was too small. The Sunday school enrollment now is 325 and John Walters Jr., is the superintendent.

The Sunday school of the Lutheran church has been established in this city since 1811, when the town was first instituted. In 1858, owing to some difference of opinion among members in regard to the pastor's refusal to subscribe to certain articles of the Augsburg confession, a new branch of the church was formed and the Trinity Lutheran church came into being and built an edifice on the present location.

The church has a most excellent Sunday school orchestra, which is under the able leadership of Miss Elizabeth Groce. Rev. Ellis Schneider is the leader of both Senior and Junior choirs and a most excellent musical program was rendered Sunday evening by the orchestra and choir. Carl Palm is the organist.

The program was:

The building committee is: H. S. Heffner, chairman, assisted by H. M. Crites, J. D. Hummel, Edward Mason

W. E. Crist, J. C. Goeller Sr., C. F. Seitz and Edward Crist.

Rev. Troutman in speaking of the new building, which will be used a Sunday school and a social center as well, said that it will be a workshop of the Holy Spirit, where spiritual life will be built along with a social and eternal life. Primarily it will be a Sunday school building and the Sunday school is the foundation of the church. We want to build for future citizenship. We are not only building a monument to honor this generation, but for future generations, for our children's children.

Rev. Troutman, complimented the work of the Ladies' society, the Men's brotherhood, the Von Bora society and the Luther league, which contributes largely to the success of the Sunday school. This Sunday school is not only a place for juveniles, it is also a place for the older members of the church. We want both young and old to become Sunday school attendants.

Lutherans never try to tear down other Sunday schools of other denominations, but it is a place for children who have no religious home and we extend an invitation to all parents to send their children to our Sunday school, if they are not affiliated with any other church.

Rev. Troutman also announced that beginning with next Sunday regular evening services will be held at 7:30 o'clock and that he would give a talk on Jerusalem, which he recently visited.

The new parish house will cost in the neighborhood of $50,000.

Leroy Young has the building under contract.

Diamonds for Miss Columbia

More than 2,000 of the nation's 3,475 miles of air routes have been marked out with electric lights for the guidance of night flyers. Revolving searchlights of 2,000,000 candlepower are placed at intervals of from ten to twenty-five miles, with "blinkers" and other small lamps between. This year about 1,700 additional miles will be added to the fast-growing network of light lanes.

Wine Can Be Too Old

A cask of wine made in 1730 was opened in Berlin recently and retailed at 35 cents a glass. Buyers pay this stiff price not so much for the quality of the wine as for the novelty of drinking 200-year-old wine. Being too old it has an unpalatable, woody taste. It was in its prime about the time the Revolutionary war was fought.—Capner's Weekly.

AIR EXAMINED FOR EVIDENCE OF FIRE

A peculiar fire-fighting instrument protects huge generators that produce electricity for a city. Sometimes such generators heat up under overloads and insulation catches fire, necessitating costly repairs. The new instrument receives from each generator in a plant a continuous stream of test air through a pipe. If any smoke appears in the test air, it drifts through a thin beam of light that is directed across the mouth of the pipe against a sensitive cell. The smoke shuts out an infinitesimal amount of the light and the instrument at once sounds a gong, stops the generator, and blows into the generator case a charge of inert gas which extinguishes any flame that may have started. Thus fire protection is automatic and sudden. The chances are slim that the power plant will ever be bothered with generator fires.

WE PRINT THE NEWSAirplane's Slowest Speed

The lowest rate of speed at which an airplane can travel and stay in the air would depend upon the plane. Roughly, it would be from 40 to 50 miles per hour. The lowest air speed is that speed just above the starting point. The stalling point is at the point where the air lift on the wings is less than the weight of the airplane, practically little above take-off speed, which is 40 to 50 miles.

National Capitol Facts

The height of the dome above the base line of the east front of the capitol at Washington is 287 feet 5 inches. The height from the top of the balustrades of the building is 217 feet 11 inches. The rotunda is 97 feet 6 inches in diameter and its height from the floor to the top of the canopy is 180 feet 3 inches.

Man Does Strange Things

It is a notable fact that most speed records are made by people who are not going anywhere.

WOMEN'S ORGANIZATION GETS DATA ON HOME EQUIPMENT

Makes Exhaustive Survey, of Nearly 8,000,000 Urban and 40,000 Farm Residences.

Washington.—A home-maker's manual to which the American housewife and her business partner, the American husband, can turn for unbiased information on the question of home equipment fundamentals and how to acquire them, is being prepared by the General Federation of Women's Clubs and will be ready for distribution in the early fall.

The survey of nearly 8,000,000 urban and 40,000 farm homes to ascertain accurate information on their equipment, which the General Federation recently completed, yielded the fact that two-thirds of the farm homes and 16 per cent of the urban homes of America are without even the sanitary essential of running water at the kitchen sink. Follow-up campaigns calculated to raise the standard of home equipment are being inaugurated in a dozen states. The handbook is a feature of this work.

The handbook in no sense replaces the commercial catalogue, as it furnishes only non-competitive information on technical, economic and planning problems relative to the acquisition of household essentials. The book begins with the simplest working units and leads up progressively and with a thought to avoiding uneconomic replacements until complete lighting, heating, cooking, sanitary and labor-saving plants have been discussed.

In the matter of running water, the kitchen drain or sink is first discussed; then the water source, pump or well; next the windmill, motor or engine; the piping of the house and the running of water to the kitchen sink, and lastly in turn, the flush toilet, the bathtub, the wash bowl, the laundry tub and the water heater. In each step suggestions are made preparing for the next advance without replacement of original equipment. An idea of costs, high, low and average, is given on each necessary piece of equipment.

The heating problem is similarly treated. Dustless, odorless units that heat the whole house uniformly either from the basement or the main floor are encouraged on account of their sanitary advantages and their convenience.

One chapter is devoted to lighting and modern equipment. The tendency of the campaign is toward the use of gas or electricity from commercial plants and stations or from home units. The simplest working installations for home plants are described and the subject is developed up to and including the "tying-up" of the home with commercial service. The use of electric current for power-driven home labor-saving devices is discussed and demonstrated.

AMUSEMENTS

If you don't like war pictures, don't let that fact keep you away from "Tin Hats" for in spite of the title, there are no actual war scenes included. It is as delightful a comedy as we have ever seen, and kept an enthusiastic audience near hysterics at the Met theater where it was shown for the first time.

"Tin Hats" is a riotous yarn about three American doughboys, who thru no fault of their own find themselves in Germany immediately after the armistice has been signed, and in command of a village. This strange trio is composed of a rich man's son, a former gangster and a roly-poly, German-American boy, played respectively by Conrad Nagel, George Cooper and Bert Roach.

Artistic Camera Effects.

The production was directed by Edward Sedgwick as his first Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, and with it he steps into the limelight as one of the foremost comedy directors. Many scenes show marked attention to lighting, and artistic camera effects seldom found in a comedy for which Sedgwick as well as his cameraman, Ben Reynolds, are responsible.

Claire Windsor is a vision as the heroine of the story, Elsa Von Bergen. Miss Windsor's regal appearance, which has been lost in the last two or three pictures, is again in evidence, caused principally by the gowns which the actress wears, and the old-fashioned headdress of 1919.

Conrad Nagel is developing into one of our foremost comedians. If it is possible for a comedian to be dignified, Nagel is that, and is creating a type of comedy essentially his own. The actor has been learning a great deal about "timing" in his last few pictures, and "Tin Hats" shows a decided improvement over his earlier efforts.

Many Laughs.

Most of the laughs of the piece are contributed by George Cooper and Bert Roach, however, who make as funny a pair as were ever seen on the screen. These two as Lefty and Dutch, bring a laugh whenever they walk in front of the camera.

Tom O'Brien, remembered as "Bull" in "The Big Parade," plays the tough top sergeant in a manner that would strike fear in the heart of any recruit.

Sedgwick himself wrote the story of "Tin Hats" which was adapted to the screen by Lew Lipton. Donald Lee wrote the continuity for this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture.

"Auto's" Derivation

The word automobile was taken from the Greek "auto," meaning self, plus the Latin "mobills," meaning movable. It is of French origin and is an adjective used as a noun. In its first usage it was applied only to pleasure vehicles or carriages. The term was created to meet the sudden demand for a word to describe the horseless, or self-propelling vehicle.

Relativity

Probably the man who was born with a silver spoon in his mouth is pretty sore because it isn't a gold spoon.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

"Friendly" Flower Names

A scientific man who indulges in an amateur way his taste for gardening says that he likes to know the scientific names of flowers, of course, but that in gardening the names he cares most for are the common names. These, he says, are like the nicknames and pet diminutives one keeps for intimate friends—not formal, not businesslike nor dignified, but just friendly.

Phyllida turned her lovely, vacant eyes on the speaker.

"Me?" she said, "Art who?"

ADULT BUTTERFLIES AND MOTHS EAT LITTLE

The chief difference in habit between moths and butterflies is the fact that with one of them most work during the day shift and with the other most work the night shift, writes William Atherton Du Puy in Nature Magazine. The chief difference in form is the way most of them wear their wings. Most butterflies put the wings on as shutters are put on a window. They are worked back and forth like shutters. Most moths, on the contrary, fold them down on the back.

Neither moths nor butterflies feed to any extent as adults. The winged state constitutes their day of glory and of mating. They sip a bit of nectar from a flower here and there, but this is by no means a serious attempt at food-getting. They could quite well get along without any food at all. The eating of a lifetime is done in the caterpillar stage. Most caterpillars are leaf feeders.

A Changeable Animal

An animal which can change into another animal and then back to its original form is the startling discovery announced by Dr. Martha Bunting of the zoological department of the University of Pennsylvania.

The "animal" is one-celled, resembling a minute drop of jelly, and belongs to the amoeba family. It can transform itself into a complicated flagellate, Doctor Bunting declares, and then effect a retransformation back to its amoeba state.

Tired of Liver Diet?

Apricots Just as Good

Rochester, N. Y.—Anemics who have had to eat liver until they revolted at the word itself may obtain a little variety with apricots, peaches and prunes. Recently experiments at the University of Rochester medical school by Drs. G. H. Whipple and F. S. Robscheit-Robbins indicate that, although liver and kidney are by far the most potent food materials for the regeneration of the red blood corpuscles, certain other animal organs and several fruits are also effective, and hence can be used to vary the diet in anemia.

A long-debated question in medicine is whether iron must be in organic combination before it can be utilized by the body in regenerating the iron-containing hemoglobin, or whether a simple inorganic salt of iron, such as ferrous carbonate, will suffice. Apparently the form of iron and the quantity in which it occurs are not the deciding factors.

Beef kidney contains three times as much iron as does beef liver, but the latter is far more effective in blood regeneration. Raspberries contain more iron than do apricots and peaches, but are inert in blood regeneration. There is certain evidence that some unknown substance is supplied by the effective foods, and that it enables the body to utilize the iron.

Some family skeletons can't be kept in a closet.

Car No. 3—15,000 miles 62.709 M. P. H.—less than 14,353 minutes

Sedan

Three Auburn 8-88 Stock Cars Ran Total of:

42,000 miles in less than 14,664 minutes

Daring and unprecedented. Far in excess of any test ever imposed on stock cars. Not done behind pad locks and timed by factory employees, but publicly, under American Automobile Association sanction and supervision.

We decided to go to extremes never before undertaken by any manufacturer in order to completely, conclusively, and overwhelmingly prove Auburn is a faster, more efficient and more durable stock car.

Through blinding fogs; through down pours of rain, under the hottest sun in years; 28 thousand times around the 1½ mile track on slippery boards; never have men and machines endured such abnormal strains!

Nine drivers, working relays days and night, could not over tax the endurance and speed of the Auburn cars. Old records completely smashed from 5 to 5,000 miles for fully equipped stock cars. New records at every revolution of the wheels from 5,000 to 15,000 miles. The speed was phenomenal . . . 34 new stock car records . . .

But What Of It?

We knew all along that Auburn cars are that fast. But, it is not Auburn's proven speed superiority that is most significant . . . frankly, that was easy and incidental. What IS important is the fine character of car necessary for all three cars to survive such speed.

How's This For Proof?

After one of the roadsters had run the unequalled distance of ten thousand gruelling miles, in less than 9,479 minutes at an average speed of over 63 miles per hour, it was taken off the track, thoroughly checked—necessary replacements made—tuned and greased.

Then, for 1,000 miles more, this same car spurred forward at over 72 miles per hour. That proves reserve power, speed and endurance unknown in motor cars until now.

Another Thriller

After 2,637 miles, the Sedan running at about 70 miles an hour speed, turned over on the wet track, during a rainstorm in the middle of the night, slid on its top with all four wheels in the air, for about 50 feet, righted itself and then crashed into the railing. Two doors and three fenders were torn off, radiator and windshield smashed. Seven hours were spent for photographs, radiator and other body repairs and the car went back on the track. It caught up with the other cars, and finished the 15,000 miles at over 62 miles per hour speed. That proves the strong construction, and endurance of Auburn cars, although because in the accident, it lost three fenders and two doors, its entire distance cannot be counted as an official A. A. A. record, but it was officially timed by the A. A. A.

Triple Proof

It would have been perfectly startling if one car had broken all these records, but three Auburn cars were in this test—and all three of them did honor to the name of Auburn.

Celebrated Restaurant in Berlin Closes Doors

Berlin.—Borchardt, Berlin's celebrated caterer, has gone into bankruptcy. After 70 years of fame as the restaurant for epicures and as catering to every German court, the establishment, with its fancy grocery, has fallen a victim to general impoverishment.

Since a new clientele among the newly rich was not forthcoming, because of the increasing demand since the war for terpsichorean and musical pleasures, this mecca for so many noted gourmets has at last been forced to close its doors. Kangaroo tails, Indian swallow's nests, sharks' fins, live trout from the Russian Neva, the regular stock in trade of Borchardt's, will be things of the past.

The former crown prince and a number of former ruling princes, as well as many distinguished foreign visitors, were always to be found at Borchardt's. One of the best customers before the war was Czar Nicholas II of Russia. Another customer was the Turkish sultan. King Edward VII of England never failed to eat at Borchardt's when sojourning in Berlin.

NEW OXYGEN TANK FOR ALTITUDE USE

Lieutenant Champion Seeks to Perfect Device.

Washington.—Altitude record making is only part of the task undertaken by Lieut. Carleton C. Champion, Jr., sky-climbing naval pilot, who successfully brought down his plane the other day from an altitude which he placed at 47,000 feet or better, with the motor flying apart and shooting flames.

He is trying to perfect the oxygen tank which makes it possible for aviators to breathe and remain conscious in the extremely rarefied atmosphere six or seven miles above the earth.

When the oxygen tube was knocked out of his mouth on his recent flight, apparently by a flying part of his engine, he lost consciousness, but regained his faculties quickly enough to fight valiantly against the flames from his motor and to strive to save the precious barographs which had made a record of his ascent.

One was demolished and the other damaged beyond usefulness, he fears, by the bursting motor, but he managed what the Navy department described as an "exceptionally fine" landing.

Champion, born September 20, 1896, has been flying only five years, but he has put in more than 1,000 hours in the air in all types of craft.

Graduating at the Naval academy in 1919, he served aboard the U. S. S. Michigan and Olympic in the Mediterranean, and then with the destroyer squadrons and the scouting fleet before taking the aviation course at Pensacola.

Almost a Vacuum

The nearest approach to the creation of a vacuum has been accomplished by Prof. R. W. Sorenson at the California Institute of Technology at Pasadena. In connection with the electrical switching mechanism of the high-tension transmission plants, he has made a glass bulb containing only one-millionth part of its original content of air. This near-vacuum prevents arcing when the current is suddenly shut off as it is often necessary to do.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

The descendants of the late Samuel Gilliland held their 22d annual reunion at the Sugar Grove, Orient, Ohio, last Sunday. The day was a very delightful one for the occasion and more than 150 guests were present, being from Oklahoma, Chicago and Indiana. The same officers were again elected and the meeting will be held at the same place on the fourth Sunday of August, 1928. It is not necessary to say how the table was relieved of its tremendous weight for, anyone who is present on such occasions knows the final results. This was about the largest gathering they have ever had and everybody certainly enjoyed themselves renewing former acquaintances.

Saturday afternoon Mrs. E. T. Spetnagel and Miss Ruth Spetnagel, of Chillicothe, held a reception, complimenting their guest, Miss Marie Crist, of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, and at that time Mrs. Spetnagel made a most interesting announcement to the guests of the engagement of her daughter, Ruth Marcia, to Mr. Allen Winhouse McBeth, of Dayton. The bride-to-be has traveled extensively at home and abroad. Mr. McBeth is the son of Robert John McBeth F. R. I. B. A. and Margaret Watt of Iverness, Scotland. He is connected with the Mead Pulp and Paper company. Among those who attended the reception were Miss Miriam Ruggles, Mrs. Harry Heffner and Mrs. Joseph P. Noecker, of this city and Mrs. K. B. Hosler and Mrs. Morris Buchwalter, of Hallsville.

On Saturday, August 20, the Swearingen and Strauss families held their fifth annual reunion at Swearingen Park, near Minerva, Ohio. The family of the late James B. Swearingen of East Rochester, Ohio, were the hosts and hostesses of the day. The weather and location were faultless and a most enjoyable time was the expression of everyone present.

About two hundred and twenty-five members of the two families were present to partake of the sumptuous picnic dinner. During the short business session the assemblage was honored by a short address from Rev. Henry Chapman Swearingen D. D., of St. Paul, Minnesota, a former moderator of the General Assembly of the United States of America. An organization was effected by electing J. Grant Swearingen, of this county, as president, and Miss Sara McKenzie, of Clinton, Pennsylvania, as secretary.

The next reunion will be held at the home of Mr. John Strauss, at Hanover, Beaver county, Pennsylvania.

MRS. KELLER PASSED AWAY IN HOSPITAL

Aged Wife of Allen Keller Died Following Operation
—Burial at Waterloo.

Mrs. Angeline Nutt Keller, wife of Allen Keller, of Monroe township, died at Grant hospital, Columbus, Thursday evening, August 25, at 4:30 o'clock, following an operation. Mrs. Keller had been taken to the hospital the day previous, and after the operation gangrene developed from which she died.

She was born near Waterloo, in Fayette county, September 4, 1845, and was married 62 years ago to Allen Keller, who survives. She leaves two sons, Aaron Keller, of New Holland and Benjamin O. Keller, of Monroe township. She leaves five grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

Of her immediate family she is survived by two brothers and one sister; Cornelius Nutt, of Mt. Sterling; James Nutt, of Waterloo, and Mrs. Samuel Holloway, of Columbus.

The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Hebron church. Burial at Waterloo.

Have Different Meanings

The words "practicable" and "practical" are sometimes confused in usage. "Practicable" is that which is capable of being accomplished, while "practical" refers to that which can actually be turned to account. For instance, aerial navigation is "practicable" on a small scale; it is not yet a "practical" means of ordinary communication.

Buried Like Royalty

At the burial of former mayor James Baker of Guildford, England, recently, his aldermanic robes were buried with him.

BABY SHOW AT STATE FAIR IS CALLED OFF

Health Director Monger Issues Order—180 Cases of Infantile Paralysis

The baby show, an annual feature of the Ohio state fair, was called off Saturday by an official order of Dr. John E. Monger, state health director, because of the prevalence of infantile paralysis.

The action was deemed necessary, Dr. Monger said, because of the continued progress of the malady. Another case, the fourth, was reported in Columbus Saturday and the total number of cases in the state now is 180. Of this number, ten are new cases, reported Saturday.

Dr. Monger's order is final, it was pointed out, because his action is presumed to be based on the welfare of humanity, and this seldom, if ever, is questioned. In Ohio, for instance, it was pointed out, an order of the state health director never has been questioned.

In instances of record, when a health order has been questioned and the issue was taken to a court for settlement, the court invariably approves the health order.

Another case, making the fourth, was reported in Columbus Saturday to Dr. James A. Beer, city health commissioner. Like the others, it is not considered serious.

Nervous Disease Often

Accompanies Greatness

It is entirely possible for a person to be neurotic, that is, have a nervous affection that gives rise to strange obsessions, and still lead a good life, even a great one, asserts Brenda Ueland in an article in Liberty. In proof of her assertion she cites several famous examples of men who became great in spite of abnormalities. "Oliver Cromwell, lord protector of England," she points out, "had violent attacks of bad temper and once had a vision in which a woman of gigantic stature prophesied that he would be the greatest man in England. "Goethe," she continues, "wrote much of his poetry while in a state somewhat resembling somnambulism and had periods of depression with hypochondrias and suicidal tendencies alternating with periods of extreme joy."

SHORTS AND MIDLINGS

Enrollment of 28,819 farm boys and girls in Ohio 4-H clubs this year mark a new high level, the agricultural extension service of the Ohio State university announces.

The problem of soil acidity in Ohio is discussed in a 16-page bulletin just issued by the extension service. It's free on request at the agricultural publications office at the university.

ROUND THE WORLD AVIATORS COVER FIRST LAP OF JOURNEY

England's Sun Shines On the Intrepid Yankees As They Come Out of Wind and Fog To the Capital of the British Empire—Trip of 2,350 Miles Was Made in 23 Hours and 21 Minutes—Crowd Was Small, but Made Up in Enthusiasm What It Lacked in Numbers.

In the soft sunshine of an English Sunday morning the big yellow monoplane, Pride of Detroit, with Edward F. Schlee and William S. Brock at her controls, came out of the western skies, circled over the aviation field and landed officially at the London airport at 10:30 o'clock.

The American aviators who are bent on circling the globe in 15 days thus completed the first leg of their long flight and in so doing made the first non-stop trans-Atlantic flight from America to London.

Hopping off at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, Sunday, the Pride of Detroit, in its flight of 23 hours and 21 minutes, ran the gamut of weather conditions across the 2,350 miles of Atlantic waste.

Lightning, thunder, fog, rain, wind and sunshine, as well as freezing weather, and all the other variations of the elements, added danger and excitement to the great adventure.

Without a wink of sleep and with only one sandwich each during the long flight, the American pilots kept their plane headed straight for England.

As they neared their goal the elements seemed to relent, for they flew the last 100 miles of their journey thru mellow sunshine over the peaceful English countryside.

At Croydon there was only a handful of persons to welcome the fliers, but those who were there made up in enthusiasm what they lacked in numbers.

Brock's first words to a policeman were in the form of an apology for being a little behind schedule.

Schlee chimed in with, "We are late, aren't we? Hope we didn't keep you standing around here all morning."

Then as the bobbies joined hands and formed a cordon around the Pride of Detroit, the two fliers piled out the cockpit and began to stretch their legs to make sure they still had them.

Brock and Schlee had ample opportunity to exercise their arms as general handshaking began. The first to greet the two aviators was T. H. Kincaid, representative of the Wright Aeronautical corporation, who had been listening for the Pride of Detroit's motor hum for nearly six hours. Then Dalas Eskell, traffic manager of the Imperial Airways, welcomed the two Americans and extended to them the freedom of the port.

Schlee and Brock for a moment stood as if embarrassed, not knowing exactly what to do. Neither did any one else momentarily, so finally police thought the 200 onlookers were doing too much crowding and began pushing the spectators back. Having in mind the great crowd which turned out to greet Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, the police were on hand in goodly numbers.

As a matter of fact there were nearly as many bobbies as all persons combined, so the bobbies had no difficulty in handling the situation. Several of them asked for autographs, which Brock granted.

Then(within a few minutes, the fliers were taken the remaining 20 miles to London by automobile for a day's rest before continuing on to Germany on their world hop. They took off for Munich at 8 o'clock Monday morning.

WILLIAM KUHN'S IMPROVING.

LESTER COATE AUTO WRECKED AT FRANKFORT

Sideswiped by Machine on Wrong Side of Road--None of the Occupants Hurt.

Lester Coate, of this city, was in an automobile collision Sunday forenoon in which his Franklin car was badly wrecked, but fortunately none of the passengers in either machine was hurt.

The accident happened about one mile south of Frankfort as Mr. Coate accompanied by Miss May Diehl, of Chillicothe, were on their way to Wilmington to attend a family reunion at Bunker Hill lodge. As they were driving along the pike, a car driven by Frank Herman Banks, of Cedarville, hit the side of the Coate car and broke down the wheels, bent the axles, wrecked the top and otherwise damaged the machine, which was taken to Frankfort for repairs.

With Mr. Banks were his wife and child. He assumed all responsibility for the accident as he was on the wrong side of the road.

Mr. Coate's car was insured in the S. G. Rader agency.

Rose Traced to Venus

There are many legends of the origin of the rose. We quote one from "Customs of Mankind": "An old tradition tells us that Venus, hurrying to Adonis with nectar, stepped upon a thorn while alighting from her chariot. No Home-Made Bread

It is frequently said men run their homes. How about home-made bread? THE ROYAL NEIGHBORS WIN SILVER TROPHY

Circle Camp Comes Home With the Bacon in Contest Held at Columbus.

The drill team of Circle Camp, Royal Neighbors, of this city, were successful in bringing home with them the coveted prize, a small gold-lined silver loving cup, which was presented by the Royal Neighbors of America at their state picnic held at Olentangy park, Columbus, Saturday afternoon, to the best drilled team. Circle Camp team competed against three other teams, all from larger cities, and older camps; Newark, Akron and Cleveland. The prize while inexpensive, is highly prized by the members of the team and each and every one feels rewarded for the hours of work which they cheerfully devoted. This is a newly organized team, the camp itself only being two years old and this being the first appearance of the drill team in public.

The team Saturday was composed of the following:

Captain, Hazel Frey; flag bearer, Mae Peters; musician, Grace Radcliffe and Mrs. Mildred Voll, Mrs. Rose Wolfe, Mrs. Helen Dawson, Mrs. Catherine Pearce, Mrs. Minnie Wilson, Mrs. Virginia Purcell, Miss Dolly Kockensparger, Mrs. George Cutler, Mrs. Mabel Scott, Mrs. Nannie Fowler, Mrs. Elsie Pearce, Mrs. Gladys Wiggins, Mrs. Florence VanRiper, Mrs. Bertha Turner, Mrs. Daisy Morgan and Mrs. Nellie Potts.

The cup is on display in the express office window for a few days, after which each member who helped to earn it will keep it in their own homes for a week each as a reminder for their faithful work.

Circle camp besides winning the prize for the best drilled team also took the second prize, $5.00 in gold, to the camp having the largest percentage of members present at the picnic. So Circle camp should be proud of their wonderful work.

Three prizes were given, the third prize being given to Maple Leaf camp, Columbus, Ohio, for the largest number of juvenile members present.

It consisted of chief priests, or the heads of the 24 classes into which the priests were divided, elders who were men of age and experience, and scribes and lawyers, that is, men learned in the Jewish law. The number of members is usually given as 71.

Domestic trouble resulted in the murder of Mrs. Lucretia Collett, 50, and the attempted suicide of her husband, William Collett, 48, Sunday at their home near the Williamsport pike, about four miles from Yellowbud.

According to officials of Chillicothe Collett followed his wife out in the yard and fired a 22-calibre rifle, the bullet entering her head under the left eye. She died a few minutes later in the arms of her son.

Collett later was found in his room with a bullet wound in his head above the left eye. He was removed to the county jail by Sheriff Alfred Immell and later to the City hospital Chillicothe, where attaches said there was no chance for his recovery.

Sheriff Immell stated Collett had been drinking heavily Sunday and due to this condition it was hard to tell just how badly he was injured.

CONSTANCE LATTIMER, actress, was quite certain she was a victim of conspiracy.

"It's my good looks," she told herself. "They are jealous and the managers side in. That is why I have never been given a real part." She stamped her small foot, tilted her chin and resolved that she would go on trying until some day her friends, the real friends, the people across the footlights, would give her such a salvo of applause as would rout jealousies and force the tardy recognition.

It was a brave resolution, but back in the head of the pretty actress was born a tiny doubt. Could it be that her only appeal on the stage was that of beauty? Were they right, those managers, who said she could not act?

As the questions persisted she worked the harder saying to herself that for one triumph she would give up the stage and the career which had beckoned. But she must first have that triumph. Then came Capt. Donald Trall in his handsome uniform and with his pleasing ways, and the problem became the more difficult.

"I cannot marry you, Donald," she said, "because it would be to surrender right now when the battle is at a crisis. You are soldier enough to understand. You see, I wish to prove to myself that I can act, to show that my efforts and dreams have not been in vain. If I stop trying, to be married, I will never know whether I could have succeeded." She looked at him wistfully. "You understand, don't you, and maybe it won't be long before I make good."

"And then?" asked the captain.

Constance sighed and a hopeful look came into her eyes. "And then I will quit the stage forever. I'm tired of it, tired of walking about in pretty clothes, repeating foolish lines, when I might be making ginger cookies in my own kitchen and for, for my own husband. Oh, Don, I hope I succeed but, until then, we can't talk about it any more."

With a double incentive the girl put still more of her energies into the task of acting. Perhaps she tried too hard, strove too eagerly, and her very anxiety defeated its purpose. She remained the same dependable member of the cast, attracting little comment favorable or other. In the company the beginners may have envied her. The older ones shook their heads and remarked that it was strange that a girl with her beauty and promise had never really arrived.

"There is something, just that little something which we would give the world to discover, that is holding her back."

There came a chance to Constance, not a great one but a part of some few more possibilities than those which had gone before. The girl put strength and brain into the rehearsals, shutting Donald and her dreams of love out of her mind. She must make good and then—she would quit with the applause ringing in her ears! She would show them, she would show Donald, and, better than all, she would show herself.

A thoughtful manager stood in the wings on the evening of the dress rehearsal. The same lack, he thought, was present in her work.

"Serves me right," he grumbled, "for thinking she could do it. I will have to find another to take her place when we move on to the big season in New York." All evening he studied her. "And yet if she could just shake out of it, just to find that flaw and hide it, she would go over big."

The opening night came and with it a cool and determined Constance fighting the greatest battle of her career. Donald was down in front and some critics from the city were there. Some how she did not care. She wanted to win the applause of the people of the town, the ones who had paid their money to get in and who made up a part of the great American audience.

At the end of her first scene she was almost frightened when she heard them clapping and it did not seem possible that it could be for her. Then she took her first curtain call bewildered at the enthusiasm she evoked. Now she was entering the spirit of the play as she had never thought she could. She was playing to people who loved her and the applause increased.

"Donald!" she ran to her lover when the curtain had gone down on the last of many calls. "I've made good, made good at last and we'll have that house, and—and those ginger cookies!"

And Capt. Donald Trall thanked his lucky stars and the sixty men in his company who, at his command, had applauded so bravely in various parts of the house.

TWO KANSU QUAKE MAKE NEW RECORD

China Hard Hit Twice in Seven Years.

Washington.—The earthquake of May 22 in the Kansu province of China happening so soon after that of 1920 in the same region sets a new record. Never before in the knowledge of Commander N. H. Heck, in charge of the United States coast and geodetic survey's earthquake investigations, have two such severe shakes in the same region occurred so close together. It was Commander Heck and his associates, using data gathered from seismograph observatories by Science Service, who located the position of the quake long before reports from the devastated area reached civilization.

Half Million Deaths in 1920.

In the quake of 1920, an estimated total of half a million people were killed, but according to reports from the region the casualties of the May earthquake numbered about 100,000. The 1920 quake was a little nearer to Peking, but other reasons are probably responsible for the lower loss of life in this latest one.

The Kansu province has been described as the "Wild West of China." Like our own wild west in the early days, it is a very unsettled region, and there have been frequent uprisings among the people of the region, who are largely Mohammedans. The last great uprising was in 1895, and since then the people have abandoned the cities in great numbers. Kulang, which is one of the cities reported as being destroyed, was described a few years ago by travelers, according to the National Geographic society, as being nearly deserted and in ruins. Had the cities been as heavily populated as in past years, the loss of life would have been far greater, as the earthquake was one of the most severe on record.

Most Severe, in Mountains.

It was across the Nanshan mountains, which lie near Tibet, that the May earthquake seems to have been most severe. A little distance to the north of the devastated region runs the famous Great Wall, which ends about 200 miles to the west of it. Practically through the region there ran in the past one of the great high roads into China. In recent times a railroad along the same route has been proposed. The great earthquakes do not necessarily mean that such a project is unsafe, however.

Though the country contains geological evidence of earthquakes in the past, until 1920 none had occurred within historic times. Perhaps the shakes in 1920 and 1927 have relieved the strain of the region, and no more will occur for centuries.

Giant Skeletons Are Uncovered in Florida

Tampa, Fla.—Giant Indians who roamed Florida swamps 500 years ago or more, living on shell foods which they cracked with their teeth, is a picture unfolded by archeologists who have delved into a burial ground on a gulf island near here.

The skeletons were discovered on a small section of land where a lone fisherman has lived for years. Scientists estimated the bones are at least 500 years old and are remains of a tribe known as the Caribs, natives of the West Indies. They are believed to have inhabited the state and adjacent islands before the arrival of Spaniards in Florida.

The skulls, larger than those of current history, battered and crushed, indicated tribal battles. The jaw and teeth are unusually large. Likewise are the bones, indicating the Indians of past ages were veritable giants in comparison with those of today.

Mounds similar to the one in which the bones were unearthed are common in the state.

The bones have been sent to the Smithsonian institution for further examination.

Use Newspapers to

Rapid City, S. D.—Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Hill, after a visit here with relatives, have returned to the diamond mines in the Belgian Congo. They have lived there three years and during that period were readers of many American publications.

"Newspapers in the Congo are a great source of pleasure and necessity," Mrs. Hill reports. "One cannot buy fresh eggs with money from the natives. Money means nothing to them. They are traders in the old sense and will barter only in kind. Our newspapers are real bargains. For instance, two days after their arrival the natives get them in return for fresh eggs. That is the only way we can get eggs from the natives."

Not Product of Panama

Panama hats are not made in Panama, as popularly supposed. They are manufactured almost exclusively in Ecuador and Peru. The misnomer arose from the fact that such hats were introduced to the world through the Isthmus of Panama.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Mercury Production

The chief sources of the world production of mercury are Italy and Spain. Of a total annual production of about 3,200 metric tons, Italy provides about 1,600 tons and Spain 1,000 tons. The production of the United States during the past six years has been about 300 metric tons per year.

Valuable Meteor

The biggest lump of luck which exists on earth lies nearly 1,000 feet below the surface, near Holbrook, in Arizona. It is a meteor, which fell from the skies and buried itself. In doing so it scooped out a valley three-quarters of a mile long and 600 feet deep. A company has bored down to it and found that it is a mass of meteoric iron, mixed with nickel and other metals. Its value is computed at $12,500,000.

Vest Dress for Stout Women of Medium Height

This vest dress, says the Woman's Home Companion, is for stout women of medium height. Plain with long lines but no severity, it is one of those convenient designs suited to a number of materials. As illustrated, the vest dress is of tan flat crepe, the graceful lines of the V opening, the vest and the pointed front making the trimming of the dress. It is also an excellent design for one of those delightful sheer woollens—wool georgette or wool voile or, if something heavier is desired, rep or kasha.

New Fall Hats Are Snug; Brown Leader in Color

The noticeable thing in hats is the new crown, snug and fitting the head. Indeed, the discriminating woman today buys her hat with a very critical eye to the way the crown fits and looks; the size of the brim is next taken into consideration, but the crown must outline and complement her head.

And due to this trend in hat fashions, a new material has been evolved, which has all the virtues of last season's velours and at the same time is exceedingly fine of texture and light of weight. It carries the quaintly intriguing title of kitten's ear, and that is just exactly what it looks and feels like.

And the colors? This looks as though it might be a season of color warmth—soft, and yet with a rich depth to them. Browns are prominent, with a lovely rosy brown holding first choice, and so on down through the browns from golden brown to seal brown. One of these shades is a gorgeous shade of coppery brown, called copper-leaf.

A color that bids fair to make history in millinery circles is Napoleon blue—not exactly new, for it has survived the summer season. It has a gorgeous vividness that might be trying to certain types.

The reds range from pomegranate to the dark, winey burgundies.

The greens show both a clear deep green and an interesting "off-shade" called almond.

The staple colors are, of course, as much in demand as ever. There will always be women who wear the grays, the sands, dark blue and black!

What Color Fur Coat, an Important Question

There is a rule relating to the wearing of fur to which few women pay any attention and yet which is a positive mandate of good taste. It has reference to the colors of furs. How often one sees a black fur coat worn over a brown frock or a dress of some other color and vice versa—a brown fur coat over a black dress! This combination is in poor taste. Black fur should always be worn over black and never over colored frocks. For the latter one needs brown or gray fur or fur of any hue other than black.

Of course, the woman who can afford them has more than one fur coat, but the woman who can afford only one coat, unless she wears a great deal of black, never should invest in black fur. Other shades are in better taste for her.

Monograms on Sports Frocks, One of Latest

Whether or not you have a monogram which suits your fancy, you can wear a simulated one on your sports clothes. In diamond shapes, squares and circles, these cut-out spots of decoration appear in the center or on the sides of sports frocks—both silks and woollens—and also on the tie ends.

Dress for Sports Wear

White is a favorite color for sports wear, and a dress of white crepe de chine achieves distinction by the addition of narrow bands of snake-skin at the belt and upon the sleeves.

SCOTLAND ONCE HOME OF CAVEMEN

First evidence that Scotland was inhabited by cavemen in the chilly days of the old Stone age has been obtained as a result of excavation in caves of northern Scotland. James E. Cree, who directed researches in four caves, under a grant from the Royal Society of London, has reported the discovery of two human skeletons in connection with bones of bears and other animals of frigid climates. Further evidence of man's occupation of the caves in ancient times was found in a lower level of gravel containing antlers and bones of reindeer together with tools of reindeer horn, antlers cut and scratched by human beings, and bits of charcoal which showed that fires had been burning. These finds are the first indication that there were any human beings in Scotland as far back as the paleolithic era, which ended some 10,000 years ago. Mr. Cree's researches have disclosed the first bones of cave bears and arctic foxes to be found in Scotland.

Most Beautiful Ceremonies
Held in the Church.The celebration of the cornerstone laying of the Trinity Lutheran Sunday School and Social building Sunday evening was largely attended.
The program was given on the site of the new parish house, but owing to a slight drizzle, Rev. Troutman invited his audience into the church where the program was concluded.The cornerstone box contains the following: The Holy Bible, Sunday school carols, names of members of the old and new vestry, copies of the Lutheran Youth, The Adult Lesson Quarterly, The Weekly Bulletin, Circleville papers; The Union-Herald Daily and Weekly, The Watchman and The Circleville Herald; names of the building committee, names of the teachers of the Sunday school; names of the pupils of the primary class;
the personnel of the Junior and senior choirs and officers of the various organizations of the church.The new building occupies ground 43 feet in width by 125 feet long. It will be built of red wirecut brick with stone trimmings and will be plain with no ornament or embellishment. The roof which will be cone shaped will be slate and floors will be of hard maple.The first floor will have two parlors, 16 by 25, opening out into a hallway and will be located in front opposite each other. Back of the parlors will be located the dining room which is 40 by 80 feet, and back of this room will be the kitchen, 20 by 40 feet.The upper floor will also have two parlors of the same size as that of the first floor and back of these will be located the auditorium, 40 by 100 feet. This room will contain a stage 20 by 40 feet. The auditorium will be partitioned off with accordion doors, to be used primarily for class and Sunday school rooms. These doors can be easily removed. If the room is desired for the giving of social entertainments.The building of the parish house was much needed as the quarters for the Sunday school in the church structure was too small. The Sunday school enrollment now is 325 and John Walters Jr., is the superintendent.The Sunday school of the Lutheran church has been established in this city since 1811, when the town was first instituted. In 1858, owing to some difference of opinion among members in regard to the pastor's refusal to subscribe to certain articles of the Augsburg confession, a new branch of the church was formed and the Trinity Lutheran church came into being and built an edifice on the present location.The church has a most excellent Sunday school orchestra, which is under the able leadership of Miss Elizabeth Groce. Rev. Ellis Schneider is the leader of both Senior and Junior choirs and a most excellent musical program was rendered Sunday evening by the orchestra and choir. Carl Palm is the organist.

Rev. Troutman in speaking of the new building, which will be used a Sunday school and a social center as well, said that it will be a workshop of the Holy Spirit, where spiritual life will be built along with a social and eternal life. Primarily it will be a Sunday school building and the Sunday school is the foundation of the church. We want to build for future citizenship. We are not only building a monument to honor this generation, but for future generations, for our children's children.Rev. Troutman, complimented the work of the Ladies' society, the Men's brotherhood, the Von Bora so-ciety and the Luther league, which contributes largely to the success of the Sunday school. This Sunday school is not only a place for juveniles, it is also a place for the older members of the church. We want both young and old to become Sunday school attendants.Lutherans never try to tear down other Sunday schools of other denominations, but it is a place for children who have no religious home and we extend an invitation to all parents to send their children to our Sunday school, if they are not affiliated with any other church.Rev. Troutman also announced that beginning with next Sunday regular evening services will be held at 7:30 o'clock and that he would give a talk on Jerusalem, which he recently visited.The new parish house will cost in the neighborhood of $50,000.Leroy Young has the building un-protects huge generators that produce electricity for a city. Sometimes such generators heat up under overloads and insulation catches fire, necessitatment receives from each generator in a plant a continuous stream of test air through a pipe. If any smoke appears in the test air, it drifts through a thin beam of light that is directed across the mouth of the pipe against a sensitive cell. The smoke shuts out an infinitesimal amount of the light and the instrument at once sounds a gong, stops the generator, and blows into the generator case a charge of inert gas which extinguishes any flame that may have started. Thus fire protection is automatic and sudpower plant will ever be bothered with generator fires.WE PRINT THE NEWS*MEMORY STONES.Confer with an expert craftsman

Oh, Dot!

When little Dorothy Kitchen, film comedienne, applied for a part, William Lord Wright, supervisor of the unit, looked her over and exclaimed: "My, where did you get those great big eyes?"

"Father and mother gave them to me for a birthday present," said Dorothy demurely.

WOMEN'S ORGANIZATION GETS DATA ON HOME EQUIPMENT

Makes Exhaustive Survey, of Nearly 8,000,000 Urban and 40,000 Farm Residences.

Washington.—A home-maker's manual to which the American housewife and her business partner, the American husband, can turn for unbiased information on the question of home equipment fundamentals and how to acquire them, is being prepared by the General Federation of Women's Clubs and will be ready for distribution in the early fall.

The survey of nearly 8,000,000 urban and 40,000 farm homes to ascertain accurate information on their equipment, which the General Federation recently completed, yielded the fact that two-thirds of the farm homes and 16 per cent of the urban homes of America are without even the sanitary essential of running water at the kitchen sink. Follow-up campaigns calculated to raise the standard of home equipment are being inaugurated in a dozen states. The handbook is a feature of this work.

The handbook in no sense replaces the commercial catalogue, as it furnishes only non-competitive information on technical, economic and planning problems relative to the acquisition of household essentials. The book begins with the simplest working units and leads up progressively and with a thought to avoiding un-economic replacements until complete lighting, heating, cooking, sanitary and labor-saving plants have been discussed.

In the matter of running water, the kitchen drain or sink is first discussed; then the water source, pump or well; next the windmill, motor or engine; the piping of the house and the running of water to the kitchen sink, and lastly in turn, the flush toilet, the bathtub, the wash bowl, the laundry tub and the water heater. In each step suggestions are made preparing for the next advance without replacement of original equipment. An idea of costs, high, low and average, is given on each necessary piece of equipment.

The heating problem is similarly treated. Dustless, odorless units that heat the whole house uniformly either from the basement or the main floor are encouraged on account of their sanitary advantages and their convenience.

One chapter is devoted to lighting and modern equipment. The tendency of the campaign is toward the use of gas or electricity from commercial plants and stations or from home units. The simplest working installations for home plants are described and the subject is developed up to and including the "tying-up" of the home with commercial service. The use of electric current for power-driven home labor-saving devices is discussed and demonstrated.

AMUSEMENTS

If you don't like war pictures, don't let that fact keep you away from "Tin Hats" for in spite of the title, there are no actual war scenes included. It is as delightful a comedy as we have ever seen, and kept an enthusiastic audience near hysterics at the Met theater where it was shown for the first time.

"Tin Hats" is a riotous yarn about three American doughboys, who thru no fault of their own find themselves in Germany immediately after the armistice has been signed, and in command of a village. This strange trio is composed of a rich man's son, a former gangster and a roly-poly, German-American boy, played respectively by Conrad Nagel, George Cooper and Bert Roach.

Artistic Camera Effects.

The production was directed by Edward Sedgwick as his first Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, and with it he steps into the limelight as one of the foremost comedy-directors. Many scenes show marked attention to lighting, and artistic camera effects seldom found in a comedy for which Sedgwick as well as his cameraman, Ben Reynolds, are responsible.

Claire Windsor is a vision as the heroine of the story, Elsa Von Bergen. Miss Windsor's regal appearance, which has been lost in the last two or three pictures, is again in evidence, caused principally by the gowns which the actress wears, and the old-fashioned headdress of 1919. Conrad Nagel is developing into one of our foremost comedians. If it is possible for a comedian to be dignified, Nagel is that, and is creating a type of comedy essentially his own. The actor has been learning a great deal about "timing" in his last few pictures, and "Tin Hats" shows a decided improvement over his earlier efforts.

Many Laughs.

Most of the laughs of the piece are contributed by George Cooper and Bert Roach, however, who make as funny a pair as were ever seen on the screen. These two as Lefty and Dutch, bring a laugh whenever they walk in front of the camera.

Tom O'Brien, remembered as "Bull" in "The Big Parade," plays the tough top sergeant in a manner that would strike fear in the heart of any recruit.

Sedgwick himself wrote the story of "Tin Hats" which was adapted to the screen by Lew Lipton. Donald Lee wrote the continuity for this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture.

"Auto's" Derivation

The word automobile was taken from the Greek "auto," meaning self, plus the Latin "mobills," meaning movable. It is of French origin and is an adjective used as a noun. In its first usage it was applied only to pleasure vehicles or carriages. The term was created to meet the sudden demand for a word to describe the horseless, or self-propelling vehicle.

Relativity

Probably the man who was born with a silver spoon in his mouth is pretty rare because it isn't a gold spoon.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

"Friendly" Flower Names

A scientific man who indulges in an amateur way his taste for gardening says that he likes to know the scientific names of flowers, of course, but that in gardening the names he cares most for are the common names. These, he says, are like the nicknames and pet diminutives one keeps for intimate friends—not formal, not businesslike nor dignified, but just friendly.

ADULT BUTTERFLIES AND MOTHS EAT LITTLE

The chief difference in habit between moths and butterflies is the fact that with one of them most work during the day shift and with the other most work the night shift, writes William Atherton Du Puy in Nature Magazine. The chief difference in form is the way most of them wear their wings. Most butterflies put the wings on as shutters are put on a window. They are worked back and forth like shutters. Most moths, on the contrary, fold them down on the back.

Neither moths nor butterflies feed to any extent as adults. The winged state constitutes their day of glory and of mating. They sip a bit of nectar from a flower here and there, but this is by no means a serious attempt at food-getting. They could quite well get along without any food at all. The eating of a lifetime is done in the caterpillar stage. Most caterpillars are leaf feeders.

A Changeable Animal

An animal which can change into another animal and then back to its original form is the startling discovery announced by Dr. Martha Bunting of the zoological department of the University of Pennsylvania.

The "animal" is one-celled, resembling a minute drop of jelly, and belongs to the amoeba family. It can transform itself into a complicated flagellate, Doctor Bunting declares, and then effect a retransformation back to its amoeba state.

Tired of Liver Diet?

Apricots Just as Good

Rochester, N. Y.—Anemics who have had to eat liver until they revolted at the word itself may obtain a little variety with apricots, peaches and prunes. Recently experiments at the University of Rochester medical school by Drs. G. H. Whipple and F. S. Robscheit-Robbins indicate that, although liver and kidney are by far the most potent food materials for the regeneration of the red blood corpuscles, certain other animal organs and several fruits are also effective, and hence can be used to vary the diet in anemia.

A long-debated question in medicine is whether iron must be in organic combination before it can be utilized by the body in regenerating the iron-containing hemoglobin, or whether a simple inorganic salt of iron, such as ferrous carbonate, will suffice. Apparently the form of iron and the quantity in which it occurs are not the deciding factors.

Beef kidney contains three times as much iron as does beef liver, but the latter is far more effective in blood regeneration. Raspberries contain more iron than do apricots and peaches, but are inert in blood regeneration. There is certain evidence that some unknown substance is supplied by the effective foods, and that it enables the body to utilize the iron.

Some family skeletons can't be kept in a closet.

Car No. 3—15,000 miles 62.709 M. P. H.—less than 14,353 minutes

Sedan

Three Auburn 8-88 Stock Cars Ran Total of:

42,000 miles in less than 14,664 minutes

Daring and unprecedented. Far in excess of any test ever imposed on stock cars. Not done behind pad locks and timed by factory employees, but publicly, under American Automobile Association sanction and supervision.

We decided to go to extremes never before undertaken by any manufacturer in order to completely, conclusively, and overwhelmingly prove Auburn is a faster, more efficient and more durable stock car.

Through blinding fogs; through down pours of rain, under the hottest sun in years; 28 thousand times around the 1½ mile track on slippery boards; never have men and machines endured such abnormal strains!

Nine drivers, working relays days and night, could not over tax the endurance and speed of the Auburn cars. Old records completely smashed from 5 to 5,000 miles for fully equipped stock cars. New records at every revolution of the wheels from 5,000 to 15,000 miles. The speed was phenomenal . . . 34 new stock car records . . .

But What Of It?

We knew all along that Auburn cars are that fast. But, it is not Auburn's proven speed superiority that is most significant . . . frankly, that was easy and incidental. What IS important is the fine character of car necessary for all three cars to survive such speed.

How's This For Proof?

After one of the roadsters had run the unequalled distance of ten thousand gruelling miles, in less than 9,479 minutes at an average speed of over 63 miles per hour, it was taken off the track, thoroughly checked—necessary replacements made—tuned and greased.

Then, for 1,000 miles more, this same car spurred forward at over 72 miles per hour. That proves reserve power, speed and endurance unknown in motor cars until now.

Another Thriller

After 2,637 miles, the Sedan running at about 70 miles an hour speed, turned over on the wet track, during a rainstorm in the middle of the night, slid on its top with all four wheels in the air, for about 50 feet, righted itself and then crashed into the railing. Two doors and three fenders were torn off, radiator and windshield smashed. Seven hours were spent for photographs, radiator and other body repairs and the car went back on the track. It caught up with the other cars, and finished the 15,000 miles at over 62 miles per hour speed. That proves the strong construction, and endurance of Auburn cars, although because in the accident, it lost three fenders and two doors, its entire distance cannot be counted as an official A. A. A. record, but it was officially timed by the A. A. A.

Triple Proof

It would have been perfectly startling if one car had broken all these records, but three Auburn cars were in this test—and all three of them did honor to the name of Auburn.

Celebrated Restaurant in Berlin Closes Doors

Berlin.—Borchardt, Berlin's celebrated caterer, has gone into bankruptcy. After 70 years of fame as the restaurant for epicures and as catering to every German court, the establishment, with its fancy grocery, has fallen a victim to general impoverishment.

Since a new clientele among the newly rich was not forthcoming, because of the increasing demand since the war for terpsichorean and musical pleasures, this mecca for so many noted gourmets has at last been forced to close its doors. Kangaroo tails, Indian swallow's nests, sharks' fins, live trout from the Russian Neva, the regular stock in trade of Borchardt's, will be things of the past.

The former crown prince and a number of former ruling princes, as well as many distinguished foreign visitors, were always to be found at Borchardt's. One of the best customers before the war was Czar Nicholas II of Russia. Another customer was the Turkish sultan. King Edward VII of England never failed to eat at Borchardt's when sojourning in Berlin.

NEW OXYGEN TANK FOR ALTITUDE USE

Lieutenant Champion Seeks to Perfect Device.

Washington.—Altitude record making is only part of the task undertaken by Lieut. Carleton C. Champion, Jr., sky-climbing naval pilot, who successfully brought down his plane the other day from an altitude which he placed at 47,000 feet or better, with the motor flying apart and shooting flames.

He is trying to perfect the oxygen tank which makes it possible for aviators to breathe and remain conscious in the extremely rarefied atmosphere six or seven miles above the earth.

When the oxygen tube was knocked out of his mouth on his recent flight, apparently by a flying part of his engine, he lost consciousness, but regained his faculties quickly enough to fight valiantly against the flames from his motor and to strive to save the precious barographs which had made a record of his ascent.

One was demolished and the other damaged beyond usefulness, he fears, by the bursting motor, but he managed what the Navy department described as an "exceptionally fine" landing.

Champion, born September 20, 1896, has been flying only five years, but he has put in more than 1,000 hours in the air in all types of craft.

Graduating at the Naval academy in 1919, he served aboard the U. S. S. Michigan and Olympic in the Mediterranean, and then with the destroyer squadrons and the scouting fleet before taking the aviation course at Pensacola.

EVER since Sir Walter Raleigh brought the first tobacco home from America, the Londoner has made fine tobacco a part of fine living.

Almost a Vacuum

The nearest approach to the creation of a vacuum has been accomplished by Prof. R. W. Sorenson at the California Institute of Technology at Pasadena. In connection with the electrical switching mechanism of the high-tension transmission plants, he has made a glass bulb containing only one-millionth part of its original content of air. This near-vacuum prevents arcing when the current is suddenly shut off as it is often necessary to do.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

The descendants of the late Samuel Gilliland held their 22d annual reunion at the Sugar Grove, Orient, Ohio, last Sunday. The day was a very delightful one for the occasion and more than 150 guests were present, being from Oklahoma, Chicago and Indiana. The same officers were again elected and the meeting will be held at the same place on the fourth Sunday of August, 1928. It is not necessary to say how the table was relieved of its tremendous weight for, anyone who is present on such occasions knows the final results. This was about the largest gathering they have ever had and everybody certainly enjoyed themselves renewing former acquaintances.

Saturday afternoon Mrs. E. T. Spetnagel and Miss Ruth Spetnagel, of Chillicothe, held a reception, complimenting their guest, Miss Marie Crist, of Johnstown, Pennsylvania, and at that time Mrs. Spetnagel made a most interesting announcement to the guests of the engagement of her daughter, Ruth Marcia, to Mr. Allen Winhouse McBeth, of Dayton. The bride-to-be has traveled extensively at home and abroad. Mr. McBeth is the son of Robert John McBeth F. R. I. B. A., and Margaret Watt of Iverness, Scotland. He is connected with the Merd Pulp and Paper company. Among those who attended the reception were Miss Miriam Ruggles, Mrs. Harry Heffner and Mrs. Joseph P. Noecker, of this city and Mrs. K. B. Hosler and Mrs. Morris Buchwalter, of Hallsville.

On Saturday, August 20, the Swearingen and Strauss families held their fifth annual reunion at Swearingen Park, near Minerva, Ohio. The family of the late James B. Swearingen of East Rochester, Ohio, were the hosts and hostesses of the day. The weather and location were faultless and a most enjoyable time was the expression of everyone present.

About two hundred and twenty-five members of the two families were present to partake of the sumptuous picnic dinner. During the short business session the assemblage was honored by a short address from Rev. Henry Chapman Swearingen D. D., of St. Paul, Minnesota, a former moderator of the General Assembly of the United States of America. An organization was effected by electing J. Grant Swearingen, of this county, as president, and Miss Sara McKenzie, of Clinton, Pennsylvania, as secretary.

The next reunion will be held at the home of Mr. John Strouss, at Hanover, Beaver county, Pennsylvania.

Have Different Meanings

The words "practicable" and "practical" are sometimes confused in usage. "Practicable" is that which is capable of being accomplished, while "practical" refers to that which can actually be turned to account. For instance, aerial navigation is "practicable" on a small scale; it is not yet a "practical" means of ordinary communication.

BABY SHOW AT STATE FAIR IS CALLED OFF

Health Director Monger Issues Order--180 Cases of Infantile Paralysis

The baby show, an annual feature of the Ohio state fair, was called off Saturday by an official order of Dr. John E. Monger, state health director, because of the prevalence of infantile paralysis.

The action was deemed necessary, Dr. Monger said, because of the continued progress of the malady. Another case, the fourth, was reported in Columbus Saturday and the total number of cases in the state now is 180. Of this number, ten are new cases, reported Saturday.

Dr. Monger's order is final, it was pointed out, because his action is presumed to be based on the welfare of humanity, and this seldom, if ever, is questioned. In Ohio, for instance, it was pointed out, an order of the state health director never has been questioned.

In instances of record, when a health order has been questioned and the issue was taken to a court for settlement, the court invariably approves the health order.

Another case, making the fourth, was reported in Columbus Saturday to Dr. James A. Beer, city health commissioner. Like the others, it is not considered serious.

Nervous Disease Often

Accompanies Greatness

It is entirely possible for a person to be neurotic, that is, have a nervous affection that gives rise to strange obsessions, and still lead a good life, even a great one, asserts Brenda Ueland in an article in Liberty. In proof of her assertion she cites several famous examples of men who became great in spite of abnormalities. "Oliver Cromwell, lord protector of England," she points out, "had violent attacks of bad temper and once had a vision in which a woman of gigantic stature prophesied that he would be the greatest man in England. "Goethe," she continues, "wrote much of his poetry while in a state somewhat resembling somnambulism and had periods of depression with typhoid and suicidal tendencies alternating with periods of extreme joy."
